

FIFTEEN DIE ON GRIDIRON.

Football Reaps Grim Harvest This Season.

Debutized Game Seems to Be but a Myth.

Baseball Also Claims Its Many Victims.

(BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)
NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(Exclusive Dispatch.) Fifteen dead and 238 injured was the harvest death reaped among football players during the season just closed. These figures, which include the contests in the West on Saturday, surpass in number of accidents, any year of the old game, and make it appear as though debutized football is only a myth.

The only sport that ever became the subject of a conference at the White House has certainly reached its highest development in point of injuries, for there were forty-three more players hurt during the last three months than in any other season on record.

The open-play game, brought about by the ten-yard rule, forward passing and on-side kicking, which was supposed to lessen the perils of the gridiron, seems to have been a failure as far as any great saving of life and limb was concerned. In 1935 baseball there were fifteen deaths directly due to the game, while twenty-six persons were seriously injured. At least 250 persons were hurt, but most of the injuries were slight.

BASEBALL, ALSO.
The baseball season was also a record-breaker, compared to the previous years. In 1935 the deaths numbered five, while in 1936 twenty-two persons lost their lives while taking part in or witnessing the national pastime.

Considering the far greater number of players in baseball than in football, however, the percentage of fatal casualties is much less than that of the gridiron. The oft-repeated defense of the game that it is the untrained boys who are the sufferers is not borne out by the injuries recorded in the following table:

Position	Deaths	Injuries
Pitchers	1	15
Catchers	1	10
Outfielders	1	12
Infielders	1	18
Batters	1	20
Managers	1	25
Umpires	1	30
Others	1	35
Total	15	238

GAME PRAISED BY CLERGYMAN.
(BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)
NEW HAVEN (CT), Dec. 1.—(Exclusive Dispatch.) Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of the Outlook, addressed the Yale students in a fatal accident this morning. He spoke of the necessity of sorrow, destruction and crime to the world's progress, and said that he was glad that men were not puppets even if the strings were not pulled by God.

"I do not know enough about football to say whether it is too many injuries and deaths from the game or not, but it is necessary to see the peril in order to develop many courage, and so this development is worth all that it costs."

"The end of life is not the building of railroads and skyscrapers, nor its pleasure, joy or even happiness. It is the development of many men and womanly women."

"I am glad to live in a world where I can be lawless if I want to, for I can also be virtuous. It is better that there should be wickedness, crime and misery than that there should be only puppet movements of the people of the world."

"When I was in college, the professor of chemistry did all the experiments himself. We looked on the performance as interesting and useless. Now I understand the students do their own experiments."

"I agree with the scientists that miracles out of the general order of the world have not been performed. Jew, Gentile and the followers of all faiths believe today that Jesus Christ was not a perfect man. But his companionship with men was not limited to the three years given in the gospel, for he has been on earth many times since."

(BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)
VIDALIA (La.), Dec. 1.—(Exclusive Dispatch.) James McCormick, a wealthy and widely known cotton planter, aged 55, and bachelor, living fifteen miles south of here in Concord, La., was called to the door of his residence last night at 9 o'clock and shot to death by two unknown negroes.

Police are scouring the country with bloodhounds and summary justice is certain. McCormick lived with his step-daughter, Mrs. Burke, who answered the knock and called McCormick in response to the negroes' statement that they wanted to talk to him personally. He had gone to bed, dressed. As soon as he reached the door one of the negroes stepped forward and shot him in the right side. He evidently knew the man, but did before he could tell his sister who they were. Mrs. Burke saw the negroes but did not recognize them.

WHO WILL WIN THE TICKETS?
Suggestions to Young Writers Who May Compete for the "Ben-Hur" Prizes Offered by "The Times."

NOW, boys and girls, forward to The Times your compositions or essays on "Ben-Hur." Send them in today. That $2 sent at the theater is worth striving for; it will enable you to witness one of the most superb and uplifting spectacles of the day.

The boy and girl competitors are merely expected to set down their own ideas or opinions concerning the story of "Ben-Hur"—or, if they choose, to briefly sketch or skeletonize the tale. For example they may tell you Ben-Hur was, what country and age he lived in, what sufferings he endured, the relations of himself and family to the Roman government, that he was a galley slave and a chariot race winner, etc.—then what they think of his character.

The promised Christmas theater party will be given on the evening of December 14, when 200 boys and girls, pupils in Los Angeles schools, who write the 200 best essays or compositions on Lew Wallace's beautiful story, will attend the play of "Ben-Hur" at the Mason Opera-house, with chapters—The Times presenting the tickets.

The conditions of the contest are not hard to be fulfilled by any wide-awake boy or girl. They are these:

You must be a pupil of a Los Angeles school, public or private. You may be in any grade in any school, or of any age. Your essay or sketch must be short—about 150 words in length. Your name and address, and the name of your school, must appear on the first page of your manuscript. You must write the essay yourself, without assistance. The essays should be sent to Ben-Hur Contest Editor, The Times, Los Angeles, before Dec. 9.

The Times will print the names of the winners.

It is not alone in quantity, however, that the Midwinter Number of The all similar publications. It will cover graphic, luminous manner, the attractive sources of the southwestern empire in Angeles, the City of Destiny.

No more fitting souvenir could be for the Midwinter Number of The Times to a man who lives in less favored sections of the world than in foreign lands. One leading feature of the winter Number is the careful consideration of the statements it contains. It is, therefore, for those who desire to learn about the South. Every resident of Southern California should send a dozen, a score, or a hundred copies of this peerless publication to their friends. It will please them and it will please California.

The price of the Midwinter Number be 10 cents. The Midwinter Number of The Times at least one hundred thousand of the world, offers an unequalled opportunity who desire to advertise legitimately. Advertisements must be received at The Times not later than Monday evening, December 1st, 1890.
